THE CALL OF THE CANARIES

From pre-conception to your golden years: Why does your environment matter?

We all know that pollution disproportionately burdens the most vulnerable among us, with the longest life expectancy – the fetus. The concept for this Online Conference grew from that fact. What are the impacts of pollution from pre-conception, throughout life into our golden years? What can we do to make better choices, so that the exposures are minimised to optimise health and longevity?

We feel this subject is most important today as we all need to make wiser choices. The vast array of products and the ease of availability is seductive, but is this 'easy way' the best way to go? Considering the rise in all environmentally-linked chronic conditions, we know that the answer is NO!

Speakers:

SECTION I

1. John Molot, MD

From pre-conception to your golden years: Why does your environment matter?

Dr. Molot will speak about the influence of environmental pollution on human health starting with the developing fetus and pregnancy outcomes. He will review what is known about the influence of those exposures on developing potential chronic disease and increased mortality over the life span.

2. Ken Flegel, MD

Artificial Scents Have No Place in Our Hospitals

In this talk, a position is promoted to exclude use of artificial scents in hospitals – perfume, after-shave and scented hair products. (Continue reading)
